(T)

a. Reserved

b. In addition to complying with the requirements of Regulations C.1. and C.2. preceding, the following regulations c. through l. apply to provision of COPT service by Pacific Bell to interconnect customer-owned coinless, commercial¹ credit-card-activated telephones.

c. Coinless COPT is a pay telephone that employs call processing capabilities, either internal to the instrument or through remote call processing capabilities, and is capable of receiving payment by means other than coin. Coinless COPT telephones may also accept coins.

d. Pacific shall provide COPT service pursuant to the regulations in this tariff for connection of customer-owned coinless, commercial credit-card-activated telephone instruments to Pacific's central office.

e. Calls placed from a coinless COPT telephone instrument may be routed in the following manner: from the instrument to Pacific's central office via a COPT line, to the customer's processor from Pacific's central office via an additional COPT line or other exchange facility, and back to Pacific's central office via exchange facilities. IntraLATA calls will then be completed over Pacific's network while interLATA calls will be sent to the IEC of the customer's choice for completion. Calls may also be routed in accordance with paragraphs f., g. and h. following.

f. Each coinless COPT telephone instrument which is connected to Pacific's central office, when activated by a commercial credit card, may be programmed to automatically dial a number associated with a Pacific access facility (e.g., Feature Group B) purchased from Pacific by an interexchange carrier (IEC) designated by the customer providing the coinless, commercial credit-card-activated telephone instrument. Calls will be routed from the COPT instrument to Pacific's central office via a COPT line and from Pacific's central office to the IEC via the access facility. Calls will then be routed to the customer's processor via a connection to be arranged between the customer and the IEC. InterLATA calls may be routed from the customer's processor back to the IEC for completion. IntraLATA calls must be routed to Pacific's central office for completion.

NOTE 1: See Schedule Cal.P.U.C. No. A6.2.1, A.2.,d. for designated commercial credit cards.

g. In the configuration described in f. preceding, the customer understands and agrees that access charges will apply, and will be payable by the IEC designated by the customer to Pacific, for all calls directed to the IEC's POP from the customer's telephone instruments, including the intraLATA calls.

h. The customers may connect their call processor to Pacific's central office via a COPT line or a measured business line. Line charges as shown in Schedule Cal.P.U.C. No. A3 apply for these connections in addition to the COPT line charge for a connection of a COPT instrument to Pacific's central office. The customer must route calls as described in e. preceding.

i. A direct connection from a COPT instrument to an IEC or to a remote call processor and then to an IEC is denied.

j. The customer is responsible for the cost of an initial audit of the remote call processor software to insure intraLATA calls are routed to Pacific's transmission facilities. These audits shall be conducted by an independent auditor acceptable to both Pacific and the customer. Pacific shall be allowed to provide the auditor with the instructions to govern the audit.

k. Subsequent audits of the remote call processor software and billing data may be conducted by an independent auditor whenever Pacific has reason to believe that intraLATA calls are not routed properly. The cost of these audits shall be shared equally between Pacific and the customer.

l. Pacific may disconnect COPT service when COPT customers bypass Pacific's transmission facilities in routing and/or completing intraLATA calls.

4. In addition to the preceding regulations, the guidelines of the Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) and Supplemental Agreement between Pacific Bell, Elcotel and Intellicall Inc. set forth in Decision No. 90-06-018 dated June 6, 1990, and Decision No. 94-09-065 dated September 15, 1994, are applicable.
